

Call for papers

Workshop on Abenomics and the Financial Markets 15 September 2016 Meiji University, Tokyo, Japan

The workshop will follow the International Conference on Economic Theory and Policy held at Meiji University, Tokyo, Japan on 16-18 September 2016.

<http://www.kisc.meiji.ac.jp/~confyagi/September2016.html>

Workshop venue

Both the workshop and the conference will take place at the following location: Meiji University (Surugadai Campus), 1-1 Kandasurugadai, Chiyodaku, Tokyo, 101-8301, Japan.

Aim and Topics

This workshop provides a forum for discussing and developing new financial and economic theories in order to assess the impacts of Abenomics on and via the financial markets. The aims are to explore the broader consequences of the reforms and how they affect financial markets, but also society, economic prosperity and their lessons for other countries. Theoretical or empirical papers dealing with any of these aspects are particularly welcome:

- Financial markets: The impact of Abenomics on stock, bond, commodity, money, foreign exchange and derivative markets.
- Monetary policy: QQE, SZIRP and the implications for financial stability of recent reforms.
- Fiscal policy: The impact of reforms on the government's balance sheet and debt sustainability.
- Corporate governance: The impact of reforms on Japanese corporations' balance sheets, and the reaction by small and medium-size enterprises.

Submission, Registration and Important Dates

Those wishing to present a paper at the workshop are invited to send a full paper or a detailed abstract to alexis.stenfors@port.ac.uk.

Deadline for submission: 31 July 2016

Notification of acceptance by: 15 August 2016

Workshop registration deadline: 31 August 2016

Workshop date: 15 September 2016

There is no registration fee.

Workshop Organising Committee

Takashi Yagi, Meiji University, Tokyo, Japan

Jan Toporowski, SOAS, University of London, UK

Ewa Karwowski, Kingston University, UK

Mimoza Shabani, University of East London, UK

Alexis Stenfors, University of Portsmouth, UK

The workshop is organised with financial support from the Great Britain Sasakawa Foundation